

Funding and Resources for International Students and Non-US Citizens

Below you will find resources for international students and Non-US citizens that are studying in the United States. There are multiple types of funding that international students may focus on to fund their education. Below you will find funding opportunities as well as general resources for international students.

Financial Aid

Financial Aid is limited for international students. We would encourage students to research funding opportunities that may be available through the country they hold citizenship within. Some countries offer funding to students studying abroad.

Please review the below resources for detailed information on financial aid opportunities for students.

Funding through Departments

We encourage international students to speak with the Office of International Affairs to inquire about opportunities for funding. If you are a graduate student, we would encourage you to speak with your department to inquire if there is available funding for international graduate students.

Some departments offer teaching or research assistantships to students.

Home Country

A number of international students that attend the University of Colorado Denver obtain funding through the country they hold citizenship with. We would encourage you to contact your local government to inquire about funding for studying in the United States.

Scholarships

Scholarships and grants consist of funding that is considered free money. Often this type of funding requires an application and an essay submission. Please review the below resources for detailed information on scholarship opportunities for international students.
