Why choose this course:

This graduate-level online course is offered during the Fall semester and focuses on:

- Theoretically grounded content in which students are challenged to critically analyze current problems in the Latino Health Community
- Apply practical and conceptual knowledge about health disparities and social determinants of health for Latinos
- Experientially focused activities relevant to Latino Health
- Discussion and analytic methods, reporting, visualization, problem-solving, and data-driven strategies to impact decisions and Latinx health care
- A panel of experts leading discussions on various topics impacting Latino Health
- Advocacy and policy applications to advance Latino health equity

Student Testimonial

"[This Latino Health curriculum] prepares students to find solutions for the health disparities that exist in the Latinx community today... I have never seen a course where we have professors/presenters that look like me [and] are doing the work I wish to do one day."
