What Can I Eat? (WCIE) Train the Trainer

Healthy Choices for American Indians and Alaska Natives with Type 2 Diabetes

November 6-7, 2025 | Choctaw, MS | 9:00 am – 4:00 pm CST

Presenters: Sarah Stotz, PhD, MS, RDN, CDCES, Assistant Professor, Colorado State University; Teresa Hicks, RDN, CDCES, Contractor, Colorado State University; and Kelli Begay, MS, MBA, RDN, Contractor, Colorado State University.

Target Audience: Registered Dietitians, Nutritionists, Nurses, Pharmacists and those providing diabetes education in Tribal communities.

The What Can I Eat? Healthy Choices for American Indians and Alaska Natives with Type 2 Diabetes curriculum teaches practitioners working in communities and healthcare sites with American Indian and Alaska Native people on management of type 2 diabetes through nutrition education. The curriculum provides culturally tailored recommendations to help increase long-term positive behavior changes.

OUTCOMES/OBJECTIVES:

As a result of attending this activity, the healthcare team will be able to:

1. Develop and plan WCIE? training sessions for community or clinical site nutrition and nurse educators.
2. Apply behavior change theories and techniques within American Indian and Alaska Native diabetes nutrition education curriculum.
3. Incorporate culturally appropriate counseling and facilitation skills into American Indian and Alaska Native diabetes nutrition education.

To claim CPEU CDR, CNE or CPE credits, you must sign in to verify attendance, attend the activity in its entirety, and complete the course evaluation. For questions, please contact Kelli Begay at kelli@mavencollectiveconsulting.com.
